Wayne D. Overholser 1956. From the novel published by Western Publishing Co.

CHAPTER 23

I DIDN'T WAKE until nearly noon, when Red and Curly slammed in, cursing the cold and rounding up Curly back into their legs and arms.

"No fire," Curly said disgustedly.

I sat up and rubbed my face, feeling as if I had not slept at all. I said, "I shot, and killed, Gene Dillingham last night." They stood rigid; then Red muttered, "By God, it was a long time coming, Will."

I told them how it had been. Red got the fire going, and the three of us stood around the stove. Then we heard Maria pounding on the triangle, announcing dinner. As we left the bunkhouse Red said, "Ben Sawhill came back with us. He was in a hurry to get here this morning."

We went into the warm kitchen and I asked about Sarah. Maria said she was in the front room with Sawhill.

When we finished eating, I said, "I hate to send you boys back into the cold, but there's a couple of chores that got to be done. One of you will have to take Dillingham's body to town. The other one has to go to Canon City and tell the sheriff. With that settled, they left the house, and I went into the front room. Sarah and Sawhill were sitting in rocking chairs in front of the fireplace holding hands. The wheel chair was not in the room. Sawhill rose when he heard me come in, and nodded gravely.

"We were waiting for you, Will," he said. "I'll eat my dinner while Sarah talks to you."

Sarah sat with her head bowed, her hands clasped in her lap. Then, very slowly, she lifted her head and stared at me, and I was shocked by the haggard expression on her face.

"It's not easy for me to say I'm whipped," she said, "but I am. I've never understood how some people can live for such simple things. Joe—happy as long as he kept settlers out of the valley. . . . John—with his silly colony. But you." She shook her head.

"You're simple-minded."

I expected her to try to explain how she had been able to walk the night before, but that apparently wasn't in her mind at all. She would ignore it, I thought, just as she had ignored so many other things. There was only one world to Sarah Pardee: her world as she wanted to see it.

I said, "I don't know how simple-minded I am, but I can tell you what I want. I want to live on the Box P. It's home to me. I'm that much like Joe. I can't go off and leave it the way you've told me to. Once I started feeling that half the ranch was mine, I couldn't keep from making plans. Changes that I think would be improvements."

"Will," she held up a hand. "Will, I should have told you

Hope To Quarantine Two States Where Corn Is Infected

By GAYLORD P. GODWIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (U-P) — The Agriculture Department will propose this week a federal quarantine on North Carolina and South Carolina where witchweed, a pernicious corn disease, has been found in nine counties.

The quarantine will not become effective for at least 30 days after the proposal is published in the Federal Register, probably Friday. The federal quarantine in conjunction with state quarantines will be aimed at controlling and eradicating the pest.

Witchweed, known botanically as "striga asiatica," is an insidious weed parasite. It destroys corn and other crops of the grass family, such as sugar cane and sorghum, and some broadleaved plants. The host plants, reduced in their capacity to take in food and water, become stunted, wilt and turn yellowish. They die if heavily infested.

The pest, a native of South Africa, first appeared in the United States last fall.

An Agriculture Research Service official said the general damage to crops, particularly corn, so far has been "not much."

The quarantine the department proposes to put into effect will cover all of both states. But for practical purposes, quarantine regulations will be confined to the infested properties.

Little is known in this country about the pest. A research

Club News ActivitiesTo Give Old House
New Look—Paint

CHICAGO — A new paint job can do as much for an elderly house as a face-lifting for an aging beauty, says one manufacturer.

Color stylist Margaret Hutchinson of Martin-Senour says one of the best ways to give an old house a new look is with a contrasting color scheme.

A white trim is smart, she said, with dark gray, deep blue, or brown, and it accentuates the texture of carving, fluting, shutters and columns. As for the darker color for an old house—its practical because it disguises uneven surfaces and plays down irregularities.

Any large, well-balanced home such as the Victorian brownstone and the Georgian style, lend themselves to the light-and-dark style. For smaller houses of no particular period a n d shape, Miss Hutchinson recommends "bon-bon" colors—light, clear pastels such as pink, pale green, blue, aqua, and yellow.

These will make the houses look larger, she said, and "lend a storybook quality." For a white house, these bright accent colors are recommended—squa, turquoise, lemon yellow, coral, chartreuse, and terra cotta.

Boone's Rifle
Was Bought
The Hard Way

FRANKFORT, — In the archives of the Kentucky Historical Society is an interesting account of the purchase of Daniel Boone's "favorite rifle" in 1900.

This story well illustrates the general public apathy toward history.

Gilbert Walden, an American humorist and showman, offered Boone's rifle to the Commonwealth of Kentucky for $50. His letter was turned over to the Kentucky Historical Society by the governor, Mrs. Jennie C. Morton, secretary - treasurer of the society from 1896 to 1920, thereupon, made an appeal for the money. On Oct. 19, 1900, she addressed the State legislature and asked for individual contributions from representatives and senators.

The responses came in slowly in the form of quarters, half dollars, and a few dollars, from 52 contributors, headed by the lieutenant governor, speaker of the house, and judges on the Court of Appeals, public auditor, superintendent of public instruction, and other officials. The Kentucky Historical Society donated $5.00 out of its savings. But to the dismay of Mrs. Morton, all contributions up to Jan. 1, 1901, the date set for the final payment for the rifle, totaled only $28.

Mrs. Morton wrote a very sad letter to Gilbert Walden advising the humorist of the seemingly impossible task of raising the balance of the money and suggesting that he attempt to sell it elsewhere. In the meantime, he could keep the $28. "Professor" Walden, as he was addressed by Mrs. Morton, agreed to this arrangement.

The secretary, then, despairing further assistance from members of the State government, made a last ditch "house-to-house" canvass among her personal friends and neighbors. This brought in $17. The society ultimately contributed the final $10, and the rifle was paid for.

Boone's rifle, in excellent firing order and condition, is today one of Kentucky's prized historic relics. But it always will be just a little more for those who know the "sweat and tears" attached to its acquisition by that wonderful little lady and confidant of governors of Kentucky—Mrs. Jennie Chinn Morton.

TV. HUSBAND GO

CHICAGO — Things will be quiet for at least a month at the home of Mrs. Audrey Corbino. Her husband, Frank, agreed in divorce court Thursday to leave home for 30 days during which time Mrs. Corbino will turn off the TV set. His wife sued for divorce on grounds he had the television set on all the time. "I'm just dying for a rest from TV," she said.

Three of the victims were thrown clear of the wreckage and the others were found pinned in the car. Several of the bodies were badly mangled. All died instantly, according to Gibbs.The youths had reportedly gone for a Sunday afternoon "joy ride" in Simon's car.
Bill Gantley, 15, Frankfort, was killed on Ky. 35 near Salvisa in Mercer County Friday night when the car in which he was riding came over the crest of a hill and plowed into the back of another car.

Seven persons were injured, none seriously, in a two-car collision Sunday morning at the intersection of US 60 and US 62, five miles east of Paducah.

At least one person drowned in the state's worst weekend as thousands flocked to the water-side to escape the heat.

Drowned in Sportsman Lake near Franklin Friday was Harold Jones, 35, North-Franklin. He and another man were hunting frogs when the boat in which they were riding apparently turned over and Jones fell into the water.

Film Shop

By RON BURTON

HOLLYWOOD — Eleanor Parker's problem concerns her reluctance to fall into someone's fountain, to say what's wrong with American men and to pose in dresses all up to about here.

This sort of thing makes the life of a press agent very difficult, indeed, particularly since a film actress should have publicity.

The most attention received by Miss Parker, who would rather go home after a day under hot lights and play with her three kids, came from her three Academy Award nominations. She just doesn't want to "make" news by saying and doing strange things.

"Why, I don't even like to go to night clubs if it means being away from my children frequently," she said. "I'm not adverse to going out, but if there's any conflict with my home life, then going out is out."

"I'm happily married. I like my home. I like my family. Maybe I'm just not exciting to write about. I'm certainly not willing to say any old thing that will land me in a couple of hundred newspapers."

Part Three Of Civil Rights Bill Goes Back
To Reconstruction Days Says UP WriterNew Sign Shows
Sign Of Times

NEW YORK — There's a new sign over the candy counter in a Brooklyn movie house: "Live Longer — Reach for a Sweet — Instead of a Smoke."

Effective August 1, Sale of All Cigarettes, Plain Or Filter Tip, Shall Be Discontinued At the Avenue U Theatre.

The theater's owner-manager, Albert L. Greene, said, "I guess you could call it a one-man crusade. I hope I didn't bite off more than I can chew."

Greene said he started after the U. S. Public Health Service issued its report on the relation between smoking and lung cancer last week. He stopped smoking himself. He asked his employees to give it up.

"My assistant stopped, the matron stopped, the operators stopped, the cashiers and the doormen — they all stopped," Greene said.

There's still a smoking section in the Avenue U Theatre, "But I don't want to be a party to selling them," Greene said. "Maybe if some of the customers can't buy them here they'll give it up and maybe they'll be grateful."

Like the picture Greene's showing this week, it's a "Friendly Persuasion."

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — It would be a fair question to ask Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell Jr., who in his department drafted the administration's civil rights bill and, also, the names of any outsiders who helped on the job.

With the authors identified, it would be reasonable to ask them about the legislative "gobbledygook" in Part III of the bill. Part III authorizes the use of the United States and the militia to enforce civil rights for Negroes in southern communities.

About all that is known of the authorship of the bill is that it was drafted in the Department of Justice, or, at least, was made available to the House and the Senate by that department. Intentionally or not, the bill's authors chose a tricky and devious method of empowering the President to use troops in the South to enforce such rights as integrated schools.

Troops Provision Buried — It would be fair to ask the bill's authors whether they sought to bury out of sight the provision for the use of troops. Their method was roundabout but effective. Back there in Reconstruction days, roughly 1869 to 1887, Congress imposed some heavy-handed legislation on the South and backed it up with the armed forces of the United States.

One of those Reconstruction bills with a legislative history spanning from July 31, 1861, to April 2, 1871, is identified now in the United States Code as Act No. 1985, Part III of the civil rights bill pending now before the Senate actually is an amendment of that Reconstruction Act, No. 1985.

This act, in turn, depends for its enforcement on still another Reconstruction force bill now identified as Act No. 1993, enacted first in 1866 and amended in 1871.

Now About Voting? It would be fair to question

Sheppard, Again

CLEVELAND authorities place little credence in the story of Donald J. Wedder (above), 22-year-old Florida escapee, who told a "conscience" story to the Deland, Fla., sheriff that in July 1954 he was in Cleveland, bought narcotics, drove over a bridge, entered a home, went past a man sleeping on a couch and went upstairs and hit a woman "two or three times" with an iron pipe, then had a tussle with the man downstairs. Cleveland police were analyzing the statement in view of the Marilyn Sheppard murder. (International)
